12 mrt 2010 the quote above is better in context the reason it gives is that interface variables are intended to be java constants the quote was just elaborating on why such a constant would be in java we use final keyword with variables to specify its values are not to be changed but i see that you can change the value in the constructor methods of the class again if the variable is

final ze3000 reb ag

20 mei 2018 however if the value is known at compile time const a 1 then you should use const over final there are 2 other large differences between const and final firstly if you re using const

27 jul 2012 104 final indicates that the value of the variable won t change in other words a constant whose value can t be modified after it is declared use public final static string when you want to

7 dec 2012 i m always confused between static and final keywords in java how are they different

i ve found a couple of references for example that suggest using final as much as possible and i m wondering how important that is this is mainly in the the context of method parameters and local
